

TEAMWORK & WORKPLACE DIVERSITY

New Hire Training Programme

WHY THIS MATTERS

Teamwork and diversity are not soft principles — they are core business capabilities.

3x

Higher Performance

Diverse and inclusive teams consistently outperform homogeneous ones on complex problem-solving and decision-making.

↑87%

Better Decisions

Teams that leverage diverse perspectives make better decisions — faster — than teams operating from a single viewpoint.

Compounding Trust

Every respectful, collaborative interaction builds trust. Trust compounds. Teams with high trust need less management and produce more.

UNDERSTANDING

Clarity over Assumption

Assume nothing. Confirm everything. Misalignment usually comes not from lack of skill but from communication gaps.

Trust over Hierarchy

The best ideas come from people who feel safe to share them — regardless of their title or tenure.

Ownership over Dependency

Every team member is a contributor, not a passenger. Own your role, your tasks, and your impact on the team.

COMMUNICATION, ALIGNMENT & INCLUSION

Misalignment arises not from lack of capability — but from differences in communication styles, cultural norms, and unspoken assumptions.

WHAT TEAMS MUST RECOGNISE

- Agreement does not always mean alignment
- Silence does not always indicate understanding
- Politeness may mask uncertainty or disagreement
- Different communication styles ≠ different competence levels

TO ENSURE CLARITY & INCLUSION

- 01 Communicate expectations clearly and define outcomes upfront
- 02 Invite questions, feedback, and alternative perspectives actively
- 03 Confirm understanding — do not assume silence means clarity
- 04 Use respectful, inclusive language in every interaction

TEAMWORK, OWNERSHIP & ACCOUNTABILITY

High-performing teams operate as systems of shared responsibility.

Clearly Defined Roles

Every team member must know exactly what they own. Ambiguity in roles creates gaps in delivery and blame in failure.

Mutual Accountability

Each person's work impacts others. Reliability is not personal — it is a collective standard every member upholds.

Initiative Over Dependency

Leaders enable ownership by defining decision boundaries. Employees who own their work are proactive contributors — not task executors.

Collective Success Mindset

Success is never just individual. When a team member wins, the team wins. When a team member struggles, the team supports.

FEEDBACK & CONTINUOUS IMPROVEMENT

Feedback is essential for alignment, growth, and performance. Its impact depends on consistency, clarity, and intent.

01 What Was Expected

Define the standard clearly before measuring performance against it. Fair feedback begins with clear expectation-setting.

02 What Was Delivered

Focus on specific behaviors and outcomes — not personality or assumptions. Keep feedback factual and grounded in evidence.

03 What Needs to Improve

End with a constructive, forward-facing direction. Feedback is not a judgment — it is a tool for growth.

EQUITY, FAIRNESS & INCLUSIVE ENVIRONMENT

An inclusive workplace ensures all individuals have equal opportunity to contribute and grow. Fairness must be intentional — not assumed.

Transparent Decision-Making

Decisions that affect people's work, growth, and opportunities must be made transparently and explained clearly — not handed down without context.

Equal Access to Opportunity

Growth opportunities, visibility, and development must be equally accessible — not limited by background, communication style, or personality type.

Active Bias Mitigation

All of us carry biases. The responsibility is not to be perfect — it is to be aware, to pause, and to actively work against assumptions that limit others.

Psychological Safety

People must feel safe to share ideas, raise concerns, and challenge perspectives without fear. Safety is built in small moments — and destroyed just as quickly.

CULTURAL INTELLIGENCE & WORKPLACE DYNAMICS

Differences in communication styles, hierarchy, and team dynamics are not barriers — they are strengths when understood correctly.

✗ MISCONCEPTIONS TO DROP

- ✗ Quiet = disengaged or unintelligent
- ✗ Politeness = agreement or approval
- ✗ Directness = disrespect or aggression
- ✗ Different style = lower competence

✓ HABITS TO BUILD

- ✓ Ask before assuming — every time
- ✓ Interpret silence as a cue to invite, not dismiss
- ✓ Adapt your style without abandoning your standard
- ✓ Balance clarity with cultural sensitivity always

TIME, DELIVERY & COLLABORATION PRACTICES

Missed expectations often result from undefined outcomes — not lack of effort.

Define 'Done' Clearly

Before work begins, both parties must agree on what a completed deliverable looks like. Vague definitions produce vague results.

Break Work Into Milestones

Large tasks without checkpoints drift. Structure work into visible, trackable stages so progress — and problems — are caught early.

Confirm Timelines Explicitly

Never assume a deadline is understood. State it clearly, confirm it in writing, and flag any risk the moment it appears.

Align Regularly

Frequent, structured check-ins prevent misalignment from compounding. A 5-minute alignment conversation can prevent a 5-day rework.

PRACTICES TO AVOID

These behaviours undermine trust, clarity, and team performance. Recognise them — and refuse to contribute to them.

Assuming Silence = Agreement

Silence in a meeting or on a message does not mean understanding or consent. It often means someone felt unsafe to speak. Always invite — never assume.

Vague or Unclear Instructions

Unclear direction produces unclear results — and places the cost of ambiguity unfairly on the person executing the work. Define clearly, every time.

Dismissing Feedback or Diverse Views

Discouraging feedback — or ignoring perspectives that differ from your own — kills innovation and signals that only certain voices matter. Both are unacceptable.

Hierarchy Over Collaboration

Rank does not equal correctness. Over-reliance on seniority suppresses valuable input from people closest to the work. The best answer wins — regardless of its source.

Ignoring Bias or Psychological Safety

Failing to create an environment where people feel safe to be honest is a leadership failure. Psychological safety is not a bonus — it is the foundation.

GOLDEN PRINCIPLES

Every employee at GGT is expected to uphold these standards — from Day 1.

I

Communicate with clarity and respect in every interaction — written, verbal, and non-verbal.

II

Actively seek and provide feedback — treat it as a gift, not a threat.

III

Define roles, responsibilities, and outcomes before work begins — not after problems arise.

IV

Take ownership and support your team's success as though it were your own.

V

Value and integrate diverse perspectives — they are your team's greatest competitive advantage.

“Teamwork and diversity are not soft principles. They are core capabilities.”

Clarity

in every communication

Trust

in every relationship

Accountability

in every outcome

By embedding clarity, trust, accountability, and inclusion into daily operations, GGT builds teams that are aligned, adaptable, innovative, and high-performing.
